OXLEY NAMES HAINES TO LEAD FINANCIAL SERVICES STAFF

WASHINGTON---Chairman Michael G. Oxley (R-OH) has named Terry Haines as staff director and chief counsel for the newly formed Financial Services Committee. Haines will be charged with managing the Committee's staff, as well as serving as its lead lawyer.

"Terry Haines has a sharp mind for policy and a deft hand at strategy," Oxley said. "He'll be assisting me in putting together a first-rate staff to support the members' work at the Financial Services Committee."

Haines is chief operating officer and general counsel at Boland & Madigan, where he specializes in financial services, high-tech, e-commerce, telecommunications, and corporate strategy issues. Before joining Boland & Madigan, he held senior positions in both the legislative and executive branches. He was chief of staff at the Federal Communications Commission during the Bush Administration, where he developed the Commission's policy agenda, served as liaison to the White House, and managed the agency's operations. He was the chief telecommunications counsel and high-tech policy advisor to the House Commerce Committee. At the east division of TCI (now AT&T Broadband), he directed the legal and government affairs operation.

Haines has worked on every major high-technology, e-commerce, and telecommunications policy issue over the past decade, including: all Internet issues, including privacy, electronic authentication, and the tax moratorium; the Securities Litigation Reform Acts of 1995 and 1998; Gramm-Leach-Bliley; and the 1996 Telecommunications Act.
